- 19 So Mr. and Mrs. Johnson go to a local building society where they _____ a number of questions — what type of jobs do they have? How 20 much do they earn? What are _____ monthly expenses? And so on. The society will also inspect the house to see if it is worth the money they 21 _____ to lend. All being well, it will agree to take part in the deal offering to lend the Johnsons up to about 90 % of the price of the house, to be paid back with interest over 25 years, or sometimes less. Building 22 societies make their money by _____ money from some members 23 of the public and lending it to _____. Many British people have building society savings accounts. They save their money with a building society, 24 which pays them interest. The society then _____ this money to people 25 who _____ to buy a house or a flat and charges them a higher interest rate on the amount borrowed.

- 26 Most British people obtain their home in one of three ways. The _____ of the population are renters, that is, they live in flats or houses 27 which they rent _____ from another person or _____. The majority 28 of the remaining 25 % live in accommodation that is owned by, and hired from, their local council. Council houses (or flats), as these are called, are 29 _____ to everyone, but in many areas there are long waiting lists, and the homes go to the most needy people. In the past few years it has 30 become possible for council house tenants to buy their _____ from the 31 local authority at a _____ cheap price — this is determined by taking into account how much rent the person has paid to the council over the years.
